BEST CARBON BLOCK FILTERS.

FITTED WITH ANTI-CORROSIVE TAPS COMPLETE.

THE PURIFYING MEDIUM used is a specially prepared granulated Charcoal (inorganic) of the very purest character, which does not permit of the growths which in many other forms of Charcoal have proved sources of serious evil. The fungoid, to which Animal Charcoal gives birth, and the myriads of worms, &c., which often appear, are alike entirely avoided.

GLASS FILTERS,

Plain and Engraved.

Made of stout glass. The carbon block being securely fitted into the bell funnel, it is not liable to become loose or to allow the water to pass unfiltered. These filters are suitable for bedroom and table use, affording a ready and simple means of obtaining purified water at any time.

STONE REFRIGERATIVE FILTERS.

This Filter is made of porous stone, in the shape of a bottle, and on account of its simplicity in use, will be found invaluable in hot climates, or where it is difficult to obtain pure water.

When filtered water is required, it is only necessary to place the filter empty, even in the most dirty water, ponds, rivers, &c., when the water will filter through the sides into the bottle, from whence it can be used in a purified state.

To keep the water in the filter, a cork tightly inserted into the neck will prevent it oozing through, consequently it is especially adapted for travelling purposes.

By slightly raising the cork the water will gently ooze through the sides, and the rapid evaporation from the surface, which always takes place in hot climates, will produce a most refreshing and delightful coolness in the water.

To clean it, it is sufficient to brush the exterior with a hard brush, or to blow into the interior, in order to open the holes in the stone.

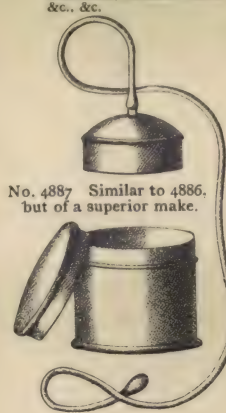

When the filter is new, or long out of use, the first two or three filterings should be thrown away.

THE SYPHON FILTER, INVALUABLE FOR TOURISTS AND TRAVELLERS GENERALLY.

This is a block of pure "Compressed Charcoal," with an india-rubber socket, or cork, into which is fitted a stout glass tube, and attached to which is a long flexible india-rubber tube manufactured from the purest rubber that can be obtained. The whole fits into a neat portable japanned case, similar to those supplied to the Ashantee Expedition. By means of the Pocket Filter, pure and perfectly wholesome water may be drunk from any pond or river by immersing the filter therein and drawing the water through the tube by suction. The blocks are readily cleansed from sedimentary matter by blowing through the tube and brushing the surface.

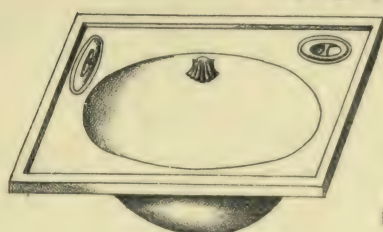

No. 4886 Pocket Filter

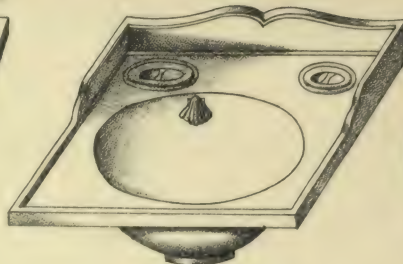

No. 4887 Similar to 4886, but of a superior make.

FINE ART POTTERY.

As it is almost impossible to illustrate more than a limited number of patterns of the Goods kept in stock by us, we solicit the favour of an early visit to our Warehouses; should this not be possible, please note that we sell almost every article produced in China and Earthenware, whether made in Europe or in China and Japan.

Our great experience and intimate acquaintance with the taste of the various markets, enable us to select only such patterns as will find a ready sale at a fair profit.

Any particular pattern or style required for your special trade that you may intrust to our care will receive immediate attention and be executed in the shortest possible time, and at the lowest prices.

A very great number of the articles shown in this department are designed and made for us exclusively, and cannot, therefore, be purchased elsewhere.

When ordering Art Pottery, please allow us to send samples of the latest novelties, stating the amount to which you limit your order.

Almost every article represented in this Catalogue is kept in stock by us, and can in most cases be dispatched within a few hours after the receipt of order, you will thus be enabled to supply your customers with the goods at the shortest notice.

Most of the patterns of Vases, Figures and other Goods illustrated in this Catalogue can, when ordered in quantities, be supplied of an inferior quality, that is, with the painting or other decoration less elaborately finished, at lower prices than those quoted in our Price List. As we do not keep these qualities in stock, two or three months are required to execute such orders.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for breakage of, or damage to, goods in transit, but we employ none but well-trained and experienced packers, thus guaranteeing freedom from breakage to some extent, unless caused by extreme rough usage or accident, such as a case falling from a waggon, etc.

All prices are quoted free at our Warehouse.

MOULDED GLASSWARE,
PLAIN, CUT AND ENGRAVED.

MOULDED GLASSWARE, PLAIN, CUT AND ENGRAVED.

Our purchases of every description of Flint Glass being on a large scale, enable us very often to sell at cheaper prices than the ordinary prices quoted by the manufacturers.

All Goods are carefully examined, and only Glass of good colour sent. Each Tumbler, Wine Glass, &c., of the better quality is carefully wrapped in paper.

When comparing prices per dozen with those quoted per Case, the advantage to the purchaser will be found very considerable.

All prices are subject to fluctuation.

Foreign Glass is packed in Cases, but Glass of English manufacture can be packed in either Cases or Casks. No charge is made for original foreign Cases (see Price List). English Glass is generally packed in Casks, which are charged at moderate prices.

When Ten Cases or Casks or more of any one pattern are ordered, a concession of from $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ to 5% will be made in the price.

Strong, sound Cases or Casks only are used for packing Glassware, and great care is taken that the Cases are properly filled up with hay or straw to prevent breakage.

Cut, Engraved, or Moulded Glass of every description made to order and to any practicable design required.

Most of the Patterns illustrated in this Catalogue can be executed in inferior Glass when ordered in quantities.

The large stock which we hold of Flint Glass of every description enables us to execute most orders intrusted to us within a few days after their receipt.

All Glass is packed by the most skilful packers in the trade.

ALL PRICES ARE NETT.

COLOURED AND DECORATED GLASSWARE.

COLOURED and Decorated Glassware, which, as an article of commerce in this country, was scarcely known half a century ago, when but a few common glasses and ornamental vases, &c., were made and introduced here, has undergone such improvements in its manufacture, that not only all modern fine colours, but also the most carefully-studied ancient and modern designs of Vases, Lustres, Baskets, Flower Stands, and many other articles, are produced.

These improvements, combined with the now celebrated hand-painted decorations and moderate prices, have given this Coloured and Decorated Glassware a high rank amongst articles of luxury designed for the ornamentation of Rooms, Halls, &c., and have made it almost an article of necessity.

The patterns which we herewith bring under your notice are but a small representation of an assortment of many thousands of different shapes and decorations, of which we hold stock. To keep pace with the constant changes which take place in the shapes and style of decoration, as also in all other manipulations to which this Glass is subjected, we are compelled to change our assortment very frequently so as to be enabled to supply our customers with the latest novelties.

We have selected, therefore, as illustrations, such patterns as we consider will find a ready sale for a number of years; but at the same time, for reasons stated above, we recommend our customers not to confine their orders strictly to the illustrated patterns, but, to some extent, to leave it with us to send a similar article to the one ordered.

Although our stock of Coloured and Decorated Glassware is by far the largest held in this country, yet it may occur that, through the great demand for certain patterns, the stock of these becomes exhausted, in which case it requires at least three months to replace. When, therefore, strict adherence to patterns is required, kindly allow that time for the delivery of such articles as are not in stock when the order is received.

On Page 149A we beg to submit list of assortments of this Glass in Cases. More than thirty years' experience as manufacturers, importers, and traders with all parts of the globe, places us in a favourable position to prepare assortments suited to stock a shop or warehouse, either in this country or the various countries where coloured and decorated glass finds a ready sale.

The prices for original packages are considerably lower than for goods already opened out for stock, on account of the saving, in our warehouse, of the cost of labour of unpacking and re-packing, and the consequent risk of breakage.

The advantage, therefore, in purchasing assortments ready packed at the manufactory is evident.

FINE ART DEPARTMENT.

In this Department the artistic world is fully represented, comprising, as it does, choice collections of the following goods, viz. :—

ORIGINAL OIL PAINTINGS,

Which, from arrangements we have made with most of the celebrated artists, to purchase at all times for cash, we are enabled to offer to our clients at prices far below those of the artists themselves.

CHROMO-LITHOGRAPHY

Has obtained during the past few years the well-earned pre-eminence over all other methods of reproducing works of art; in it not only is each colour and gradation of light and shade rendered with remarkable accuracy, but even the very texture of the paint and rough surface of the paper is copied with the strictest fidelity, each shade being produced by means of a separate stone, and in many cases no less than from thirty to forty stones are employed, thereby producing so perfect a fac-simile of the original work that even the greatest critic may often be deceived, and mistake the copy for the original; and further, Chromo-Lithography, from the very low price at which it can be produced, has contributed largely towards increasing a love and taste for the fine arts throughout the whole civilised world, far beyond the most sanguine expectations of the original introducers of the art. We have, in consequence, given this branch of the business our special attention, and are publishing for each successive season a number of new and choice subjects from the most celebrated and much-admired artists of the day. For particulars of same, a detailed catalogue, containing some four thousand numbers, will be sent post free on application.

OLEOGRAPHS,

Although in production precisely the same as Chromo-Lithographs, are exclusively representations of oil paintings, while the chromo is a fac-simile of a water-colour drawing; the former is strained upon canvas, the impression of which is to be seen upon the surface; they are varnished, and often framed without glass, thus rendering the deception perfect.

COLOURED GERMAN PRINTS.

When ordering these goods, we respectfully beg to remind our clients that it is highly necessary to state for what market they are intended, and whether for Native or European trade; if European, whether Catholic or Protestant, as the utmost care will be taken to select a class of subjects suited to the market.

CARTE DE VISITE AND OTHER FRAMES

In ivory, gilt, brass, oak and carved wood.

PICTURE FRAMES.

Upon this important branch we bestow the greatest care and attention, at all times suiting the frame in width and style to the class of subject to be framed; the quality of the gold always being of the purest, will stand the test of time and climate.

ETCHINGS.

The revival of the long neglected art of Etching is one of the most remarkable events that has taken place in the artistic world during the last few years. Most of our leading artists, including Hubert Herkomer, R.A., Birket Foster, F. Seymour Haden, P. G. Hamerton, Leopold Flameng, and numerous others of equal renown, now use the etching needle with such effect as to restore this almost obsolete art to the position it held when Rembrandt, Albert Durer, and later, J. M. W. Turner, produced their chefs d'œuvre.

A selection of the best productions of both English and French painter-etchers, either originals or after pictures by the great masters, always kept in stock, care being taken to procure the best possible impressions, both in Artist's Proofs and Prints.

PHOTOGRAPHS.

Plain photographic views in Great Britain; the castles, cathedrals, abbeys, the Thames, mountains and lake districts, also views in Switzerland, Italy, Sinai, Palestine, Athens, Egypt, Spain, India, China, Japan, Norway, Normandy, and Belgium, over 1,500 subjects in all, size 8¼ by 6½, and mounted on white boards 15 by 12, framed or unframed.

COLOURED PHOTOGRAPHS.

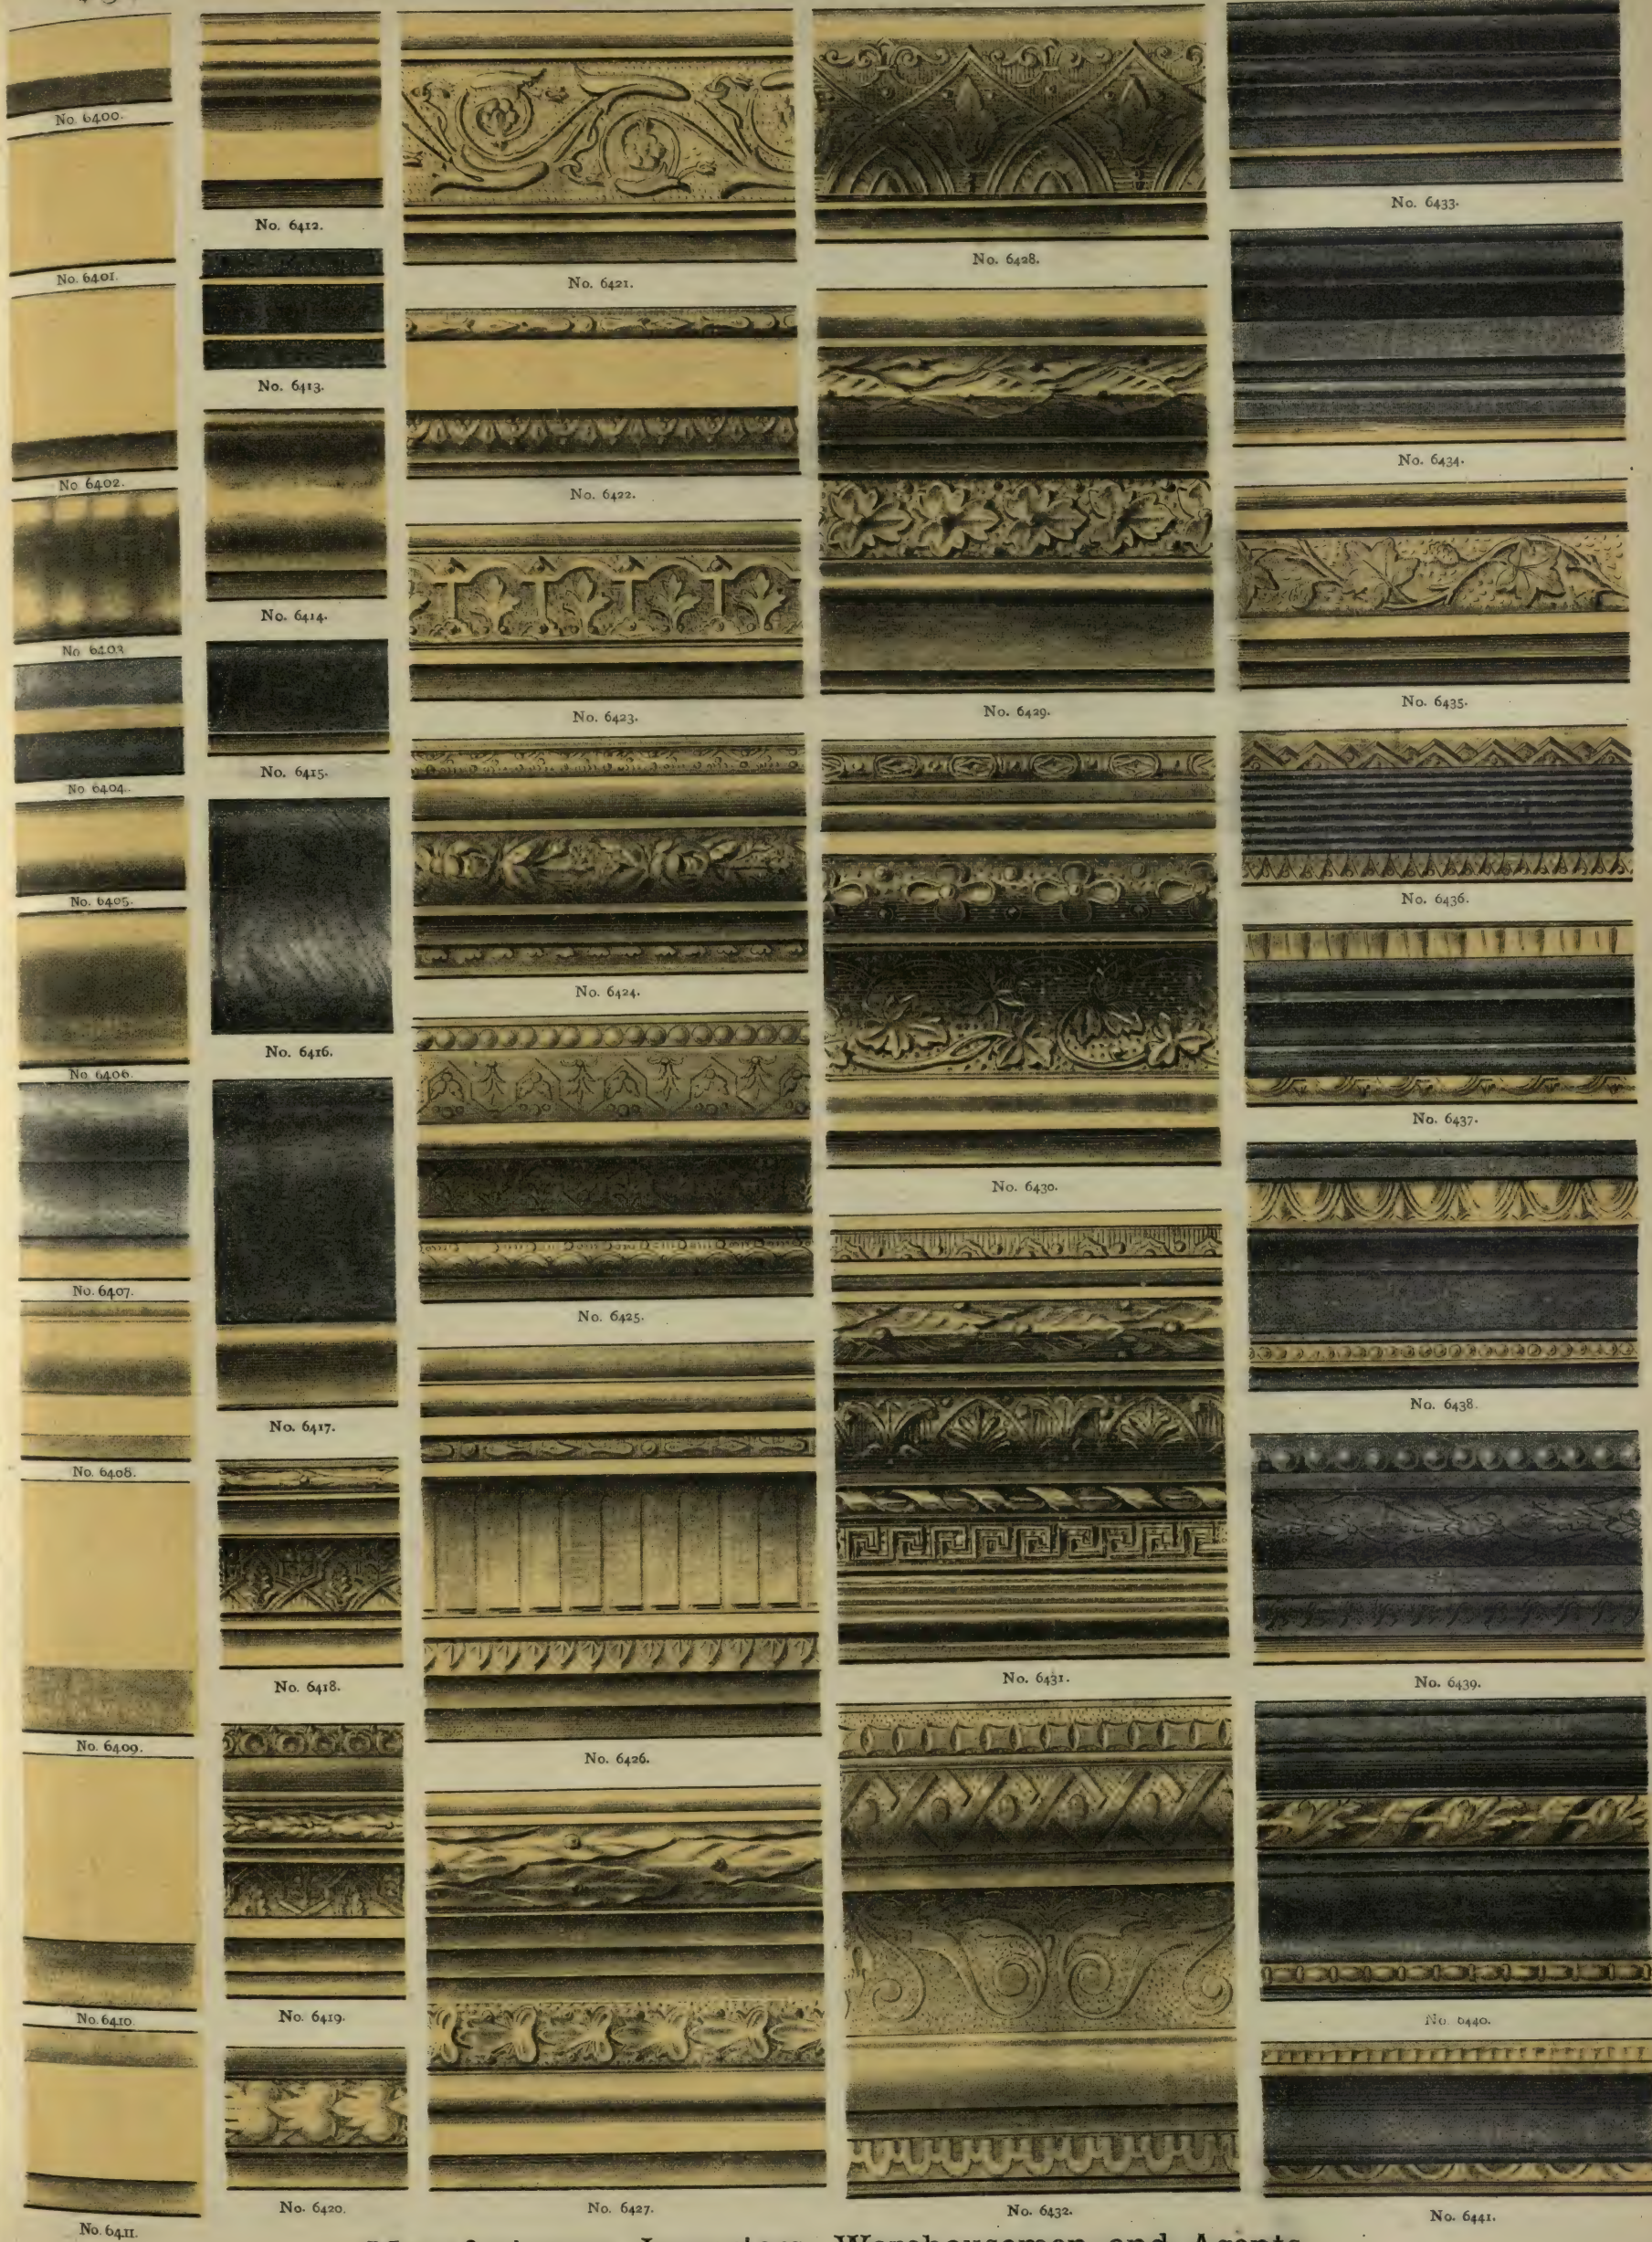

A very fine collection, comprising some 500 subjects—comic, historical, and religious, also female portraits; at prices varying from 7s. 6d. to 42s. each. These are beautifully coloured by our own special artists, and are really works of art. Any subject coloured to order.

The Packing adopted by us for Framed Pictures is such that little or no breakage ever takes place in transit.

PEINTURE-BOGAERTS.

NEW PROCESS OF REPRODUCING OIL PAINTINGS ON CANVAS AND ON PANELS.

No. 6724.—"Good News."

Peinture-Bogaerts is the title under which one of the most notable art-discoveries of modern times makes its debut. Beyond question the latest, this is at the same time the most successful method of any yet attempted for reproducing oil paintings by purely mechanical means. In the fidelity with which the copies represent the originals, and the lowness of price at which the works are produced, lie the secret of the success achieved. The invention of a Dutchman, of the name of Henri Bogaerts, the new process promises to afford a solution of that vexed question of the hour—the popularisation of art. "Painting is welcome," exclaimed Shakespeare, yet it has taken the 300 years that have elapsed since the poet spoke, to teach the world the true position and proper mission of "... liberal arts,

The embellishments of life."

The love of the beautiful, like hope, springs eternal in the human breast; the sentiment is common to mankind. Natural man, whether prince or peasant, is amenable to the beneficial influences exercised by the fine arts; poverty and ignorance alone have blunted his sensibilities. A painter's embassy to the world is:

"To wake the soul by tender strokes of art,
To raise the genius, and to mend the heart."

Fortunately, however, the day is passed in which the necessity existed to prove, by force of elaborate argument, the desirability of instilling and cultivating art tastes among the masses.

"Make art domestic; to the people's home
Bring the rich treasures of old Greece and Rome;
And 'twill be found, though slow the progress be,
That art to pleasure adds morality."

Hitherto the means adopted for securing this desirable end, while in a measure commendable, have again and again defeated the very object sought to be gained.

Lovers of art and all believers in the regeneration of mankind by purely human and moral rather than supernatural means will heartily welcome an invention by which oil paintings may be reproduced with a fidelity to the originals that actually deceives the author of the work, and at a price that brings the fac-similes within the purchasing power of the great mass of the people. In the Middle Ages crowned heads and powerful lords were the self-constituted patrons of art; to them every disciple of "Nature's handmaid" was, perforce, compelled to look for countenance, support, and fortune. In the present day the people is the great court of appeal, the tribunal whose judgment is sought; the critic whose approval is solicited; the buyer whose custom is desired. Now-a-days, artist, manufacturer, and scientist alike find it more profitable to devote their best energies to the task of supplying the requirements of the million, than to that of pandering to the whims and follies of the few. The principle that all men are equal, as regards their right and title to the full enjoyment of the pleasures of life, regulates the commercial no less than the political arrangements of the civilised world.

"Our friends are as true and our wives are as comely,
And our home is still home, be it ever so homely."

By the introduction of the "Peinture-Bogaerts" the artistic embellishment of the homes of the people is rendered possible. Like all inventions and innovations which have brought about great and lasting changes in the world, political, social, or artistic—the new process makes its first appearance in a very simple and unassuming guise. Although, undoubtedly destined to effect a complete revolution in all matters appertaining to the production of works of art, it does not seek to take public opinion by storm, but rather to win it by force of merit alone.

Produced on canvas or panels, as may seem most desirable, having that roughness of surface peculiar to paintings, and which even goes so far as to suggest the use of the brush in their production, characterised by a refinement of execution well in keeping with their refinement of conception—the originals of which these manufactures are copies being of a high order of merit—and possessing of that indescribable look which in all other cases distinguishes the real from the imitation in the matter of paintings, these reproductions satisfactorily and successfully meet the requirements of the hour. Indeed, it will be a source of wonder if the skill and ingenuity of the future produce results in this particular direction more commendable than those attained by the Bogaerts process. So unimpeachable authorities in matters of this kind as Paris Figaro, L'Univers Illustré, the Cologne Gazette, and other eminent continental newspapers, and the representative organs of art and printing in Belgium, France, Holland, Germany, and Switzerland, have written of this discovery and the beneficial revolution it is calculated to effect, in terms of high praise. Authoritative, however, as such judgment unquestionably is, its weight and value bear comparison to that possessed by the testimony of artists whose works have been reproduced. By this valuable discovery not only may "the rich treasures of old Greece and Rome" be brought to the homes of the people, but also the art possessions of every country under the sun. Engravings and photographs have done much to familiarise the masses with the achievements of our renowned artists, and in so doing have performed a good and glorious work; but owing to the lack of two important qualities, colour and life, the effect they have produced has fallen far short of the possible. While meeting to the full both these requirements, the "Peinture-Bogaerts" are the same time art works in the true sense of that term—tasteful, harmonious, refined, and elevating. The invention of printing rendered inestimable service to the cause of literature and science; the invention of a process by which oil paintings may be faithfully and cheaply reproduced, is calculated to effect a revolution no whit less beneficial in the domain of painting. While the diffusion of human thought, the other achievement of the popularisation of art.

It seems almost incredible that a picture, carefully painted on canvas, in a richly gilt frame, could be produced in the sizes as herewith given, at the prices quoted, especially when it is considered that they are mostly painted by highly educated ladies and gentlemen. Many of them are excellent copies of some of the best works painted by the most eminent artists of the Continental school.

Not many years ago we sold similar paintings at more than ten times the price now quoted.

ORIGINAL OIL PAINTINGS BY ENGLISH ARTISTS.

On Canvas, in handsome English Gilt Frames.

No. 6883.

Every original work sold by us can be guaranteed.

It would be almost useless to quote prices here, or to give sizes or description, as each separate painting is valued according to its special merits and the reputation of the artist.

Oil paintings similar to illustration No. 6883 are painted by rising artists, the whole of whose productions we have secured, and in the Price List we quote approximate prices at which we are now able to sell these works in best gilt English frames.

We have just succeeded in completing arrangements with one of the most eminent and rising artists for the sale of his pictures, which place us in a position to supply every description of Oil Paintings at lower prices than those at which they can ordinarily be purchased from the artists direct.

Commissions intrusted to our care will always receive immediate attention.

All pictures are framed with the best Gold Mouldings under our own supervision, care being taken that each frame is suited to the picture.

WATER COLOUR DRAWINGS.

Our selection of Water Colour Drawings may not be so large as that held by many other houses, but those now at our disposal are some of the best, and, at the same time, some of the cheapest yet brought under the notice of the public; comprising Landscapes, Seascapes, and Figure Subjects.

Twelve Water Colour Drawings, in neat gilt frames, assorted subjects and sizes, at £9 per case.

MIRRORS.

LOOKING GLASSES, OVER MANTELS, AND MIRRORS.

The sizes of the Glass given are the actual measurements, and not, as is customary in the trade, quoted one inch higher and one inch wider than the real dimensions. Thus, the Chimney Glass quoted here as 49 inches by 39 inches is commonly styled and known as 50 inches by 40 inches.

The outside measurements of Frames are given, but these are only approximate, and are liable to slight variation of an inch or so in Carving, &c.

Almost every Article represented in this Catalogue is kept in stock by us, and can in most cases be dispatched within a few hours after the receipt of order. You will thus be enabled to supply your customers with the goods at the shortest notice.

Best Leaf Gold only is used in the gilding of our Chimney Glass Frames, and silvering of the glass is proof against ordinary damp.

Special Designs by experienced draughtsmen to suit furniture in the Chippendale, Queen Anne, Early English, and other styles.

Silvered Plate Glass of fine quality, and silvered so as to be protected from ordinary damp, fitted to Hotels, Restaurants, Show Rooms, &c., at special prices.

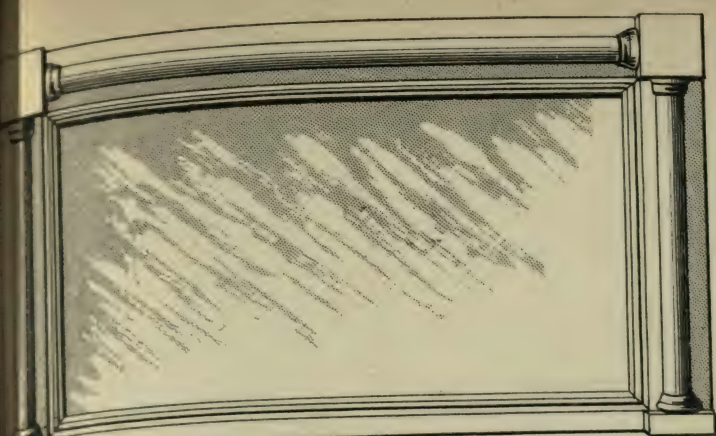

We can, when ordered, make an inferior quality of Chimney Glasses at a considerable reduction from the prices quoted in our list; but prefer not to execute such orders, as such goods are likely to bring our Customer's name into disrepute on account of bad wear, although they are made in close imitation of the Goods sold by houses of good repute.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for breakage of, or damage to, goods in transit; but we employ experienced packers thus minimising risk of breakage.

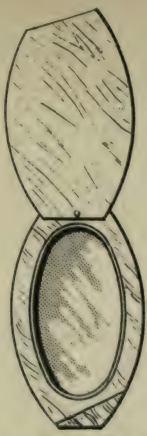

All prices are quoted free at our Warehouse.

ALL PRICES ARE NETT.

Packing Cases and Packing charged 2d. per foot superficial. Packing Cases taken back at 1d. per foot when returned free of expense, and within one month of their delivery.

Fine Crystal Rolled Rough Plate Glass, about $\frac{3}{16}$ inch thick, in plain, fluted, and diamond patterns, is kept in stock at the Works, in all the most saleable sizes.

Cathedral and large Quarry Rolled and thick Chequered and Figured, as well as ordinary Rough Plates, for flooring purposes, can be had in a short time from the Works.

Expense of carriage and risk of breakage to be borne by the purchaser.

SILBER LIGHT AND DUPLEX LAMPS,
GAS CHANDELIERS AND FITTINGS.

WHAT IS THE SILBER LIGHT?

The Silber Light is the most Economical, the Purest, and Steadiest Light ever produced from Vegetable, Mineral, or Animal Oils, or Gas.

WM. VALENTIN, Esq., F.C.S. (late Principal Demonstrator of Practical Chemistry in the Royal College of Chemistry, London), said—"The light produced by the burners constructed on these new (Silber) principles is whiter and steadier than any light I am acquainted with; and the increase in the illuminating power, as compared with that from ordinary burners hitherto in use, is fully equal to from 40 to 50 per cent., without any increased consumption of oil."

The Silber burner is of circular form, and is so constructed that four concentric supplies of atmospheric oxygen have access to the flame, two to the interior surface, and two to the exterior, one of each (exterior and interior) being impinged at the root of the flame, and the other at a somewhat higher elevation, so that those particles of carbon which, in ordinary burners, pass off unconsumed, are met by a fresh supply of atmospheric oxygen, and at once rendered incandescent. It is in the entire combustion of the fuels that the superiority of the Silber burners consists, as it is obvious that, in addition to getting a larger light for the same consumption, or the same light with a less consumption, the large percentage of carbonaceous compounds which, in ordinary lamps, are liberated in a partially consumed condition, do not mingle with the air of the apartment in which we live.

The Silber Tubulated (or Circular) gas burner is constructed upon the same principle as the oil burners, but produces better comparative results, as the burners in almost general use when it was introduced were (and it might be written now are) of the crudest kind possible, and no less than 50 to 70 per cent. of the gas was set free in a partially decomposed state, thus loading the air with vitiating compounds to the destruction of books, plants, and furniture, to say nothing of the injury done to the human lungs.

The Times says:—"The principle on which Mr. Silber has produced these results is by the careful regulation of the quantity of air admitted to the flame and of the points at which it is admitted: so that the exact requirements of the chemical process called combustion may be fulfilled, and the combustion itself rendered perfect. In all other burners there is either too much air for the gas or too much gas for the air; with the result that combustion is imperfect. The common fault is that there is too much gas for the air, in which case the gas, although in a certain sense 'consumed,' is not burnt, but is suffered to escape, more or less changed, into the atmosphere; often to the great injury of property and of health. The whiteness and seeming solidity of the flame are evidences of perfect combustion. The chimney remains clear and bright for any length of time, and carbonic acid and water are probably the only products of the burning."

The following is taken from a paper read before the Members of the Royal United Service Institution by A. M. Silber, Esq., A.I.C.E., and it will be found to afford much information as to what the Silber Light actually is:—

"It would carry me far beyond the limits of my available time to-night if I were to attempt to place before you, in any minuteness of detail, the nature of the changes which collectively constitute combustion; but I must crave your indulgence for a few moments while I speak of the broad principles. I am well aware that these principles must be familiar to my audience, but for the sake of completeness I can hardly avoid some brief reference to them. Combustion, then, depends upon a chemical union between the oxygen of the atmosphere and the hydrogen and carbon which are contained in the several substances used as fuel, such as solid fat, animal, vegetable, or mineral oil, or gas. The combustible solids and liquids, however, are not combustible while they remain in their solid or liquid forms, but only when first brought into the state of gas; and the function of the wick in a lamp or candle is to elevate the fluid fat to the flame by capillary attraction in such quantity that it may be volatilised by the heat, and thus brought into a state for combustion. Gas, as opposed to the fats, does not require a wick only because it is already in a state to be consumed, and can be delivered into the flame in sufficient quantity by the agency of pressure alone. Assuming the fuel to be a pure hydrocarbon, the products of complete combustion would be carbonic acid and water only; but if the fuel is impure the impurities may form other compounds of various kinds, some of which, especially some of the gas products, may be highly destructive to many organic substances, and even to the health of the human body. Besides the incompleteness of combustion which may be due to the presence of such impurities, there is another form also which is of very general occurrence, and which depends upon a departure from the correct proportion in which the atmospheric air and the fuel should respectively be present in the flame in order to unite. It is manifest, or at least it becomes manifest when stated, that if the fuel should be present in excess the combustion cannot be perfect. If the fuel be in a gaseous form, either at ordinary temperatures or in consequence of exposure to the heat of the flame, any excess which may be present may escape unburnt, and may be diffused abroad in the surrounding atmosphere; while, if the fuel be in a liquid form, the excess will either drown the flame and extinguish it, or, if not in sufficient quantity for this, will undergo only partial combustion or decomposition, forming products which may either be volatile and thus capable of diffusion, or which may remain and clog the fibres of the wick in such a manner as to impair its conducting power. We see all these results constantly produced in common flames. We have gas escaping only partially burnt or in various sulphur compounds, all being injurious to those who breathe them, and some being destructive to books, pictures, and furniture. We have petroleum escaping unburnt and producing its characteristic odour in the room, and we have all ordinary lamp-flames flagging after a short time from the exhaustion of the conducting powers of the wick. The whole matter may almost be summed up by saying that if we have too much fuel for the air supply, the oxidation and combustion of that fuel are necessarily incomplete, and if we have too free an air-supply for the fuel the temperature of the flame will be reduced by the air-current, and the combustion will be rendered imperfect in that way.

"Prior to the commencement of my own experiments, the regulation of the fuel supply had been the only matter which had engaged attention. There is an apparent exception in the case of Argand, who brought his air supply to the inside as well as to the outside of a flame; but the exception is apparent only. An Argand burner, properly explained, is nothing more than a slit, or a line of openings, bent round into the form of a ring, and the chimney, although it serves to quicken the air supply, to steady it, and to send it in two definite directions, has little or no designed influence upon its quantity.

"When a naked flame is burning in the open air, it is liable to be so suddenly cooled by currents that the temperature necessary for combustion cannot be maintained, and the flame is said to be "blown out." When it is burning in an inclosed space, as in an ordinary room, it is subject to the action of air-currents in a less but still in a marked degree; insomuch that its variations of position and direction furnish the most delicate tests by which the presence and the course of currents can be determined. The air which feeds the flame finds entrance into the room by various channels, designed or accidental, and it enters with a certain velocity, which, when resisted by the presence of any substance against which it strikes, becomes converted into pressure, which, in its turn, may again initiate movement. When, however, the air which enters a room through a small aperture or apertures is colder, and consequently of greater specific gravity than that which the room already contains, the former, by expansion, loses both its velocity and its power of exerting pressure; and it then becomes mingled with the air around it by a process of gradual and insensible mixture, according to the law of the diffusion of gases. We have, therefore, three conditions of in-coming air: the rush of a moving current, the pressure of an arrested current, and the imperceptible and gentle mingling with its surroundings of the current the force of which has been consumed in the production of expansion. In an ordinary room, well warmed, the entering air is usually cold enough to be distinctly more dense than that which the room contains, and it rushes in through various chinks furnished by imperfectly fitting doors and sashes. The velocity of the entering currents is gradually arrested by the resistance of the comparatively stationary air which they meet, and some of their force is expended in producing their expansion; so that, before they reach a point very remote from that of their entrance, they are brought to rest, and become subject to the law of diffusion. When the air around a flame is moderately still, the flame feeds itself by its heating action, which causes the ascent of the air above and around it, and an equable lateral flow from all sides, to take the place of that which is thus removed. Under ordinary circumstances, this equable flow is only sufficient to support a somewhat sluggish rate of combustion; and the effect of the chimney of an Argand burner is to accelerate the upward movement by restraining it laterally, and thus to accelerate also the lateral flow by which the flame is supplied with oxygen. If a violent commotion is produced by opening a door or window, or if a flame be placed exactly in the tract of an entering current before the force of this is exhausted, in either case the flame will be fluttered and disturbed; the rush of air past it being too great for its requirements, and sufficient to lower its temperature injuriously. Such conditions, however, are only of momentary or occasional occurrence: and, in all ordinary circumstances, the atmosphere of a room is so quiet that its few perturbations may be disregarded, and the burners for the production of light may be satisfactorily constructed upon the hypothesis that the air around them will be in a state of equilibrium, with a supply just sufficient to balance the consumption. To make a perfect burner for these conditions, it is only necessary to provide for the measurement, by a definite inlet, of the quantity of air which is admitted to the flame, as well as of the quantity of fuel, and to provide also for the distribution of this air in the manner and direction which are most desirable. It was formerly believed by gas engineers that a better flame was produced in Argand burners by what is called "throttling" the gas; that is, by compelling it to pass through very fine openings or channels before it was delivered into the burner, with a view to taking off the effects of the pressure from behind; but it has recently been shown that this belief has no foundation. I have here a burner fitted to an ordinary half-inch pipe, and you will observe that its action is in no way different from that of one which is throttled in the ordinary manner. The simplest form of burner for perfect combustion is shown in my tubulated gas-burner, in which the supply of gas is regulated by a common tap, and the air-supply, partly by this square opening and partly by variations in the height of the chimney, according to the amount of light which it is desired to obtain, and so that the air and the fuel bear a constant and definite relation to one another. In order to provide for the proper distribution of the air, this pipe is inserted within the burner, in the centre of the flame, and it gives the in-coming air a definite direction towards the place where it is required. In the common Argand burner, as soon as a certain diameter is exceeded, the flame wavers and becomes feeble, because the mid-channel is then so large that the entering air may pass upwards clear of the flame, and without feeding it; but the internal tube, or, in large burners, a series of concentric tubes, causes the air to feed the flame, however large may be the circle of the burner, and has enabled me to make burners with a single wick, for the consumption of vegetable or mineral oil in lamps for domestic purposes, of any diameter that may be desired, as shown in the specimens now before you. You will observe, moreover, that the air, before it reaches the flame, passes through so much metal work that it becomes heated, and hence does not lower the temperature of the flame in any material degree. Finally, the chimney, by which the flame is inclosed, serves as a shield against the pressure of transient air-currents, and maintains a sufficient degree of steadiness for all ordinary purposes. A burner thus constructed, placed in an ordinary sitting-room, is liable to occasional and momentary perturbations, from sudden draughts, the opening and shutting of doors, and so forth, but its usual state is one of great quietude, during which the gas supplied to it is perfectly consumed. The practical result is, that for the same consumption of gas it gives more light than the best Argand which previously existed; and also that, because it consumes all, or nearly all, of the gas supplied to it in light-giving, it leaves little or none to go free, either unconsumed or partially consumed, in the form of noxious compounds. Another result of the perfect combustion is, that the light more closely resembles sunlight in its quality than does any other which has been produced. I am informed by Professor Barff that its prismatic spectrum is nearly identical with that of the solar ray; and it certainly allows nearly all shades of colour to be distinguished as if in the day-time.

"In gas-burning, where the fuel is already in a state fit for combustion, the problem of affording the best attainable light-giving flame is presented to us under its simplest form; and the application of the same principle to the consumption of oil has required certain modifications of detail. The chief of these has been to prevent the premature destruction of the wick: and this has been accomplished by keeping the level of the oil below the flame, so that the upper part of the wick shall never be drowned in fluid; and next, by making the wick stand free, and clear of contact, between two metal cylinders, so that it shall not be scorched by the hot metal itself. By attention to these points the burner before you was obtained. It may be used, with slight alteration, for either vegetable, animal, or mineral oil, and its advantages over most others are perhaps so manifest that they scarcely require to be pointed out."

SILBER'S PATENT PETROLEUM, PARAFFIN, OR KEROSENE BURNER WITH CIRCULAR AND FLAT WICKS.

The chief advantages offered by Silber's MIRATUS DUPLEX EXTINGUISHING BURNER are—

1. The Burner is so constructed that it evolves the least possible heat compatible with proper combustion.
2. Simplicity of trimming—the wick only requiring to be cut off level with the top of the wick tubes. The corners need not be cut off.
3. Increased illumination—which is far in excess of that obtained from any other Duplex burner, and can be reduced or increased, up to 35 CANDLE-LIGHT, at will.
4. Duration of light—the flames are maintained at a uniform height, without appreciable diminution during the whole period of burning.
5. Economy of consumption—the atmospheric air being properly and scientifically mixed with the flames, no particles of the oil can pass off unconsumed; the light therefore showing proper combustion, the atmosphere is kept free from smell.
6. Preservation of wick—the same adjustment of air supply tends to prevent the too rapid carbonization of the wick, a smaller quantity of which is exposed to the flame than in ordinary flat-wick burners, so that it is only necessary to cut the wick every third or fourth day.
7. The flames are almost inappreciably affected when the lamp is carried about.
8. The Extinguisher is so constructed that in putting out the light it does not in any way interfere with the wick, nor necessitate further trimming before the lamp can be relighted.

No. 8201.—SILBER'S MIRATUS DUPLEX BURNER, with EXTINGUISHER, is constructed upon the most approved scientific principles, and affords a higher illuminating power than any other Duplex burner in the market; it is fitted with a collar which enables it to interchange with the ordinary Duplex burner. It has two parallel wicks each $1\frac{1}{8}$ inches wide. (Drawn full size.)

For advantages offered by this burner please read paragraphs 1 to 8 on this page.

First Prize Awarded,

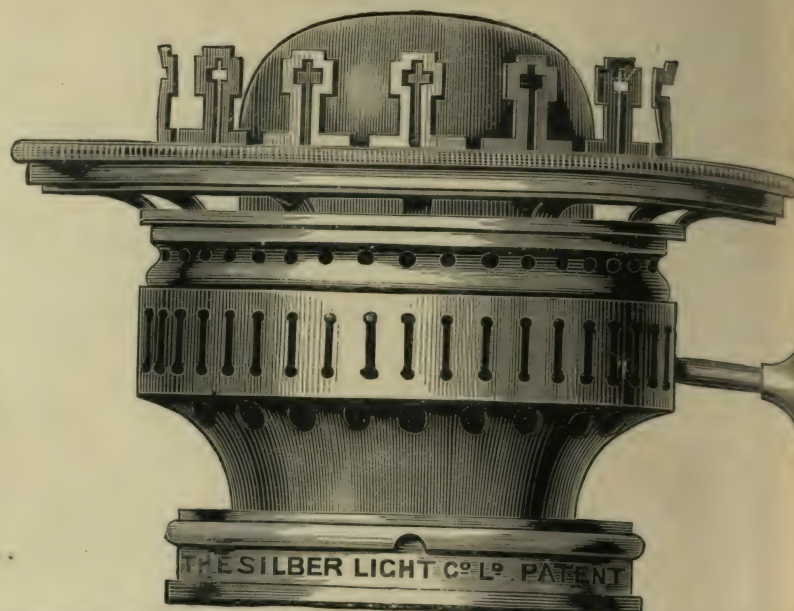

Sydney, 1880.

First Order of Merit,

Melbourne, 1881.

No. 8202.—The Silber Miratus burner is of similar construction to the Miratus Duplex burner (No. 8201), but only one wick $1\frac{1}{8}$ inches in width, and is not provided with an extinguisher. The light it affords is equal to that of about 25 Sperm Candles.

No. 8203.—This burner is a reproduction of the ordinary Duplex burner, but is provided with an extinguisher of our own construction which will reduce the two flames to any desired height or completely extinguish them when required. It is made fitted with the Silber arrangements for burning under a Punkah or in a draughty place.

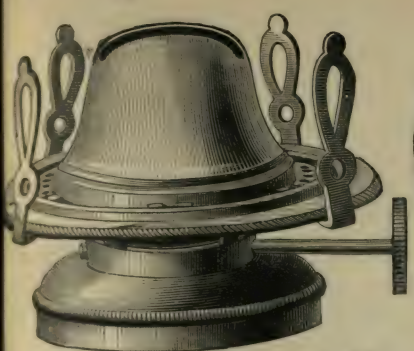

No. 8204.—The Silber (Patent) Circular Burner (for burning petroleum, paraffin, or kerosene) gives a light equal to 22 sperm candles, and with the present method of winding the wick no difficulties are experienced.

The wick is flat, $2\frac{1}{4}$ inches wide, but by the process of winding it emerges at the top of the wick-tubes in a circular form. In consequence of only about the thirty-second of an inch of wick being exposed above the wick-tube (to produce the necessary light), it carbonises very slowly, and the only attention required to keep the wick in proper condition for performing its functions is to rub a duster over it so as to remove the charred portion once every three or four days, and to fill the oil container with fresh oil every day.

Light for light, it is the most economical burner extant. This burner can be supplied with a Screw Collar as shown on lamp No. 8232 on page 230, or with the bayonet fastening collar as drawn, which enables it to interchange with the Duplex burner, No. 8201, with the Miratus Duplex burner, No. 8202.

The above burners can be made in cheaper qualities when ordered in quantities.

CIRCULAR AND FLAT WICK BURNERS FOR PETROLEUM, PARAFFIN, OR KEROSENE.

No. 8205.—Comet Burner for $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch wick. Made also for $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch and $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch wick. Especially suitable for hand lamps.

First Prize Awarded,

Sydney, 1880.

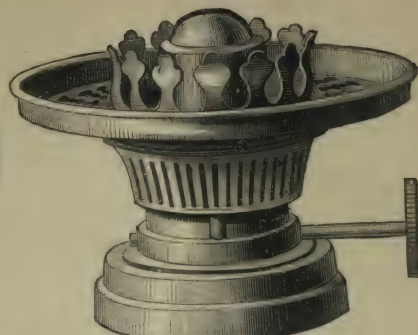

No. 8206.—Anucapnic Burner, which requires no chimney, and when fitted with a lotus moon, burns steadily. It is made to take 3 sizes of wick, viz.: $\frac{1}{2}$ -in., $\frac{3}{8}$ -in., and $\frac{1}{4}$ -in.

THE PRESS ON THE SILBER LIGHT.

"THE TIMES."

"IN order to raise an oil lamp to the level of gas in point of cleanliness and convenience, it was first of all necessary to devise a burner and accessories which should secure complete combustion, and which should thus preserve the wick from becoming loaded with waste. For this purpose it was necessary to convert the oil into gas, not in the flame, but somewhat beneath it, and so to regulate the two factors of combustion—the quantity of this gas and the quantity of atmospheric oxygen—that neither of them should be present in excess. Mr. Silber has fully attained both these results; and he has done this, not so much by any invention, as by the patient study of the principles underlying familiar rule-of-thumb practice, and by the exact adaptation to each other of parts which had previously been adapted only roughly and approximately. It would be impossible without the aid of diagrams fully to describe his contrivances, but it may be said that he has succeeded in producing an argand or circular burner for petroleum which gives a perfectly bright, clear, smokeless, and odourless flame, together with an illumination by the side of which a flame of the same magnitude, furnished by one of Sugg's gas burners, looks dull and ghostly. These circular burners for petroleum can be made any size, from the smallest to a yard or more in diameter, all that is necessary being the introduction in the larger sizes of an inner core of concentric tubes, by which the passage of air to the inner aspect of the wick is controlled, and its course advantageously directed. One of these burners, having a diameter of $1\frac{1}{4}$ inches, gives a light equal to that of 28 standard sperm candles, each consuming 120 grains per hour. A burner of $1\frac{3}{4}$ inches diameter gives a light equal to that of 50 candles; and in all of them the top of the chimney may be obstructed without the production of smoke, so that a silver spoon held over the opening remains absolutely untarnished."

"THE LANCET."

"THE Silber Light, to which attention has recently been directed by two articles in the Times paper, seems to be an invention that has important sanitary bearings. According to the descriptions of it that have been published, Mr. Silber has succeeded in producing a lamp which effects the perfect combustion of any kind of mineral or vegetable oil, that gives a greater amount of light than has ever before been obtained for equal consumption, and that sends nothing into the atmosphere but carbonic acid and water. In the first place, it is well known that gas—London gas at least—gives off during its combustion a variety of sulphur compounds that are highly destructive to books, furniture, and pictures, and that certainly cannot be entirely harmless to human lungs. Both gas burners and lamps, moreover, are commonly so constructed as to emit a considerable quantity of finely-divided and unconsumed carbon, which gives a peculiar stuffy sensation to those who breathe the air in which it is suspended. Perhaps the best test of the practical effect of gas combustion is furnished by burning a small jet or mere night-light of gas in the bed-room, and by then entering this room during the night after being in the open air. Any medical man who has gas in his house, and who is liable to be called up, may speedily apply this test for himself, and we are much mistaken if it will not lead him to relegate the sulphur-loaded compounds sold by the metropolitan gas companies to the passages and the basement, and to use some other illuminating agent for the bed-rooms and sitting-rooms of his family. The Silber lamps give off nothing that can be in the smallest degree injurious—neither unconsumed oil, nor sulphur, nor finely-divided carbon; and, when they are used to burn petroleum, they afford an amount of light for 1s. 6d. that is almost precisely equivalent to that given by 1,000 feet of London gas at 3s 6d. In many cases the additional light will be more important than the pecuniary saving, and will come next in value to the preservation of the purity of the atmosphere. A large amount of eye disease is caused or aggravated by working at various occupations with imperfect light; and the brilliant illumination afforded by the Silber lamps seems likely to be of great benefit to numerous persons who at present use their vision under heavy disadvantages."

"THE BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL."

"THE importance of any great improvement in artificial light is so considerable, not only for purely medical purposes, such as microscopical lamps and reading lamps, but from general hygienic considerations in lighting of wards and living rooms, that considerable interest attaches to the success which has attended the practical study of this question by Mr. Silber, and the undoubted improvements which he has introduced."

"The advantages derived from the use of a lamp which, while giving the maximum amount of light, is unaccompanied by the dangers and inconveniences attendant upon the employment of the means of obtaining artificial light in vogue until within quite a recent period, and now by no means effete, are, we think, likely to be universally appreciated. To obtain this laudable result, Mr. Silber has devoted unwearied attention to the study of the phenomenon of light and the laws which govern it. So successful have been his labours, that the invention which bears his name changes the old blue and yellow lights into a pure white unwavering flame. By reason of the superficial study given to the laws which regulate combustion till within recent years, lamps were constructed on a system which rendered the union between the hydrogen and carbon of the oil or gas and the oxygen of the atmosphere imperfect; the defective apportionment of these agents resulted in halting combustion, dull red illumination, smokiness, and in the circulation of deleterious chemical compounds in the room. Although means were carefully taken to furnish with regularity the oil or gas to support the flame, insufficient attention was given to the maintenance of the requisite amount of air to aid combustion."

"THE LONDON MEDICAL RECORD."

"MR. SILBER'S improved Argand must now be pronounced the only lamp of this kind which satisfies the requirements of science. This lamp not only admits a just sufficiency of air to the flame, but the air is better warmed before it impinges. He causes this warm current of air to flow to the bottom part of the flame, where it is most required, and directs also a current of air to the central part of the burner, which supplies the necessary quantity of atmospheric oxygen to the upper part of the flame."

"This uniform blending of the air with each part of the flame results in rendering it pure and white, and very considerably lessens the blue colour which is significant of waste, and which is very plainly visible at the base of all imperfect lights. The creation and maintenance of this white light—not yellow light—is a proof of perfect combustion. The uniformity of pure light in the Silber Argand is due to an inner narrow tube of metal, open at top and bottom, which has been duly proportioned, after immense care, and which when placed in the centre of the burner directs continuously the requisite air-draught to all parts of the flame. If this simple tube be taken out, the old-fashioned poor and trembling light which formerly so troubled and annoyed us becomes visible, but when dropped again into the ring of light the full and improved flame instantly beams upon the beholder."

"An Argand gas burner, constructed upon the Silber principle, combines all the advantages of the Silber burners for mineral and vegetable oils; the chief among the results obtained by their use is relief from the vitiated atmosphere so noticeable where ordinary gas burners are used. This is easily understood when it is explained that the Silber gas burners give off nothing which can be in the least injurious, whilst ordinary gas burners load the air with partially consumed carbon and other deleterious compounds, injurious alike to health, plants, and furniture."

"THE SANITARY RECORD."

"MR. SILBER has succeeded in bringing his improvements to bear upon the moderator lamps, which burn the vegetable oils. The ordinary moderator lamp, in which the oil is made to flow over the wick, consumes for each candle-light given 65 grains per hour, while the Silber improved moderator consumes only 49 grains, a direct saving of at least a third. The Silber colza oil burners can also be affixed to the common lamps fed on the bird-fountain principle. The company also vend a reading-lamp on the latter principle, which, with a less consumption of oil, yields a light almost as luminous as the moderator. But it has, we must confess, been reserved for Mr. Silber to introduce publicly the best burner hitherto invented. This invention consists in the adaptation of his scientific principle to the argand burner, and, by means of his properly regulated air-currents, the Silber Tubulated gas burner has been proved to yield, photo-metrically tested, the highest illuminating power of which gas is capable. We ought, however, not to neglect pointing out that, owing to the perfect combustion permitted, the Silber Light, when decomposed by a prism, casts upon a screen the same spectrum of colours as does a ray of the sun."

"THE FIELD."

"ON examining the mechanism of this burner we found it constructed in a most simple yet abundantly strong manner, the wick being turned up and down by two double-cogged wheels (acting on its exterior at nearly opposite sides) A pair of scissors then cuts off any such portions as may project, care being taken that the wick is turned up (not down) immediately before the final trimming. This precaution is necessary whenever the wick is touched for trimming purposes, as without it a perfectly regular flame is not always obtained, owing to the turning up and down affecting differently the two edges of the wick when they meet to complete the circle. So also, in regulating the light—if it is necessary to turn it down, this should be a little overdone, so as to allow of the burner being in all cases finally turned up. We need scarcely remark that, when once this precaution is pointed out, no difficulty whatever is experienced, as it is quite as easy to adjust the wick by carefully turning it up as by turning it down. The Argand table is supplemented by a smaller inner tube, as in all Mr. Silber's table lamps, and on this Mr. Silber lays great stress—whether with or without foundation we do not pretend to say. In all other respects the burner is in principle like his old one, which we were compelled to condemn in 1874. The chief improvement in the lamp, as it appears to us, consists in the cog-wheels for turning the wick up and down; in the use of the flat wick, instead of the slit circular one; and lastly, though not least in importance, in the increased width of the jaw in which the wick is held, so as to free the cotton from compression and allow the capillary attraction of its fibres to act with full force. But the explanation of its mechanism is of little comparative importance, since what we are chiefly concerned with is its utility as a light-producing machine, and the only point necessary to consider in the former direction is whether that mechanism is simple and durable, which we have already shown that it is, as far as our opinion goes; indeed, in this respect, we can conceive nothing more durable and free from tendency to get out of order."

"From the above report it may be gathered that we consider Mr. Silber has at length produced an absolutely perfect petroleum lamp, for we can detect no fault whatever, either in its construction, regarded with a view to 'wear and tear'; in the kind of light given; in its unsusceptibility to draughts of air or motion when carried in the hand—from both of which it is remarkably free; in the amount of light produced in proportion to the consumption of oil; in the comparative amount of heat developed; or lastly, in its suitability to the capacity of the average servant—in which we have carefully tested it. We have previously thought it our duty to point out defects in Mr. Silber's inventions; but we can assure that gentleman that we have much pleasure in now laying before our readers the above extended list of merits to which the improved Silber lamp may, in our opinion, fairly lay claim."

"Since writing the report on this lamp in the Field of November 17th, we have ascertained, by prolonged experiment, that any trimming of the wick is entirely unnecessary, provided the lamp is not turned down before blowing it out. When this is done the charred crust on top of the cotton is more or less broken; and if the lamp is re-lighted without any trimming, the flame is higher at the parts where the carbonised cotton is lifted above the level of the wick. But, with the above precaution, not only is the flame of uniform height, but it is certain not to be too high, unless it is turned up, for which there is no occasion; so that a servant may light this lamp and take it directly into the drawing or dining-room, without any risk of smoking. In practice we have found that the wick does not require to be turned up more than $\frac{1}{2}$ of an inch in seven hours' burning; and, as there are about four inches available, a wick ought to last fully four months, even in the winter when the evenings are long. We need scarcely remark that a knowledge of this absence of necessity for trimming reduces the trouble of managing this lamp to a minimum, leaving nothing to be done but to fill the container daily with oil."

"DR. KITCHENER wrote, a great many years ago, that when a man was past fifty he soon had occasion to bless the memory of the inventor of snuffers. These once useful implements have been improved out of existence; but even a generation which never saw them may greatly suffer, especially among those who are addicted to nocturnal reading and writing, from the defects of artificial light. A literary friend has lately imparted to me how much his discomforts of this kind have been removed by following the advice of an oculist, who told him to work at night only by the light of Silber burners, consuming either oil or gas. It seems that the light given by these burners, besides being abundant in quantity, is almost exactly like sunlight in its quality; so that it produces the same spectrum when refracted through a prism, and allows even the most delicate shades of colour to be distinguished. My friend, who had manifestly been getting up the subject and was enthusiastic about it, said that the irritating effect of ordinary artificial light is chiefly due to its superabundance of yellow, and that from this the Silber lights are free. I impart this information for the benefit of all whom it may concern."

"THE CHRISTIAN WORLD."

"I AM writing to-night under better auspices than I have ever done. Alas! I am growing old, and I don't see so well as I did. I dislike candles; I am not partial to gas; and I shudder as I read of the accidents arising from carelessness in the use of paraffin lamps; and yet to-night I seem to sit in an enchanted palace, with a light shining round such as I will be bound to say was never seen in the parish before. I could see a miracle had been wrought as I entered the door. There was outside a brighter light in the hall and through the curtains, and when I entered, there were my wife and my little ones all beside themselves with joy. Generally as I come from the fresh air outside I find a sulphury smell in the gas—that was gone; the heat of the room is oppressive and offensive—that was gone; the light was yellow and dim—it was now white and clear; and as I sit I can read the smallest type without glasses—a thing I could not have done last night. It is really marvellous, and all the result of a little trouble—simply by the application of the Silber Gas Burners."

"Let any one at this time of the year enter any workshop, or printing-office, or warehouse, and you feel at once that the atmosphere of the place is bad, and that the gas gives out an unpleasant amount of heat, and consumes and vitiates the atmosphere which the occupants of the room are compelled to breathe. The cause of this is imperfect combustion. All artificial light is the result of a chemical combination between the oxygen of the air and the hydrogen and carbon of the substance which is burnt to afford the illumination. If the combination be imperfect, the result is a thick black smoke, an unpleasant atmosphere, and a dull red flame. In common lamps, whether gas or oil, we see this every day. It was with oil lamps Mr. Silber first began his experiments. His aim was the construction of a lamp which wasted nothing, which, in fact, consumed its own smoke, and thus avoid all the nuisances of which we have spoken. Next he applied the principles of combustion which he had mastered to gas-burners, and no one who has used his will ever return to the old ones. There is no comparison between the two; there is no smoke, no black ash to darken the ceiling, to choke the lungs, but a clear atmosphere and a bright white light marvellous to see, and as pleasant to work by as the light of the sun. It is the boon of boons. The prayer of Ajax was for light. 'Light, more light,' were the last words of the dying Goethe. 'Light, more light,' is what the Silber lamp provides for us all. It is told me that this light is gained with a lessened consumption of gas; that, in fact, with the Silber burner, the consumer saves his pocket as well as his eyes, and gets what he never does under the old system, full value for his money; and this is a consideration in these days, when living is so dear and trade is so bad, and money is so hard to obtain."

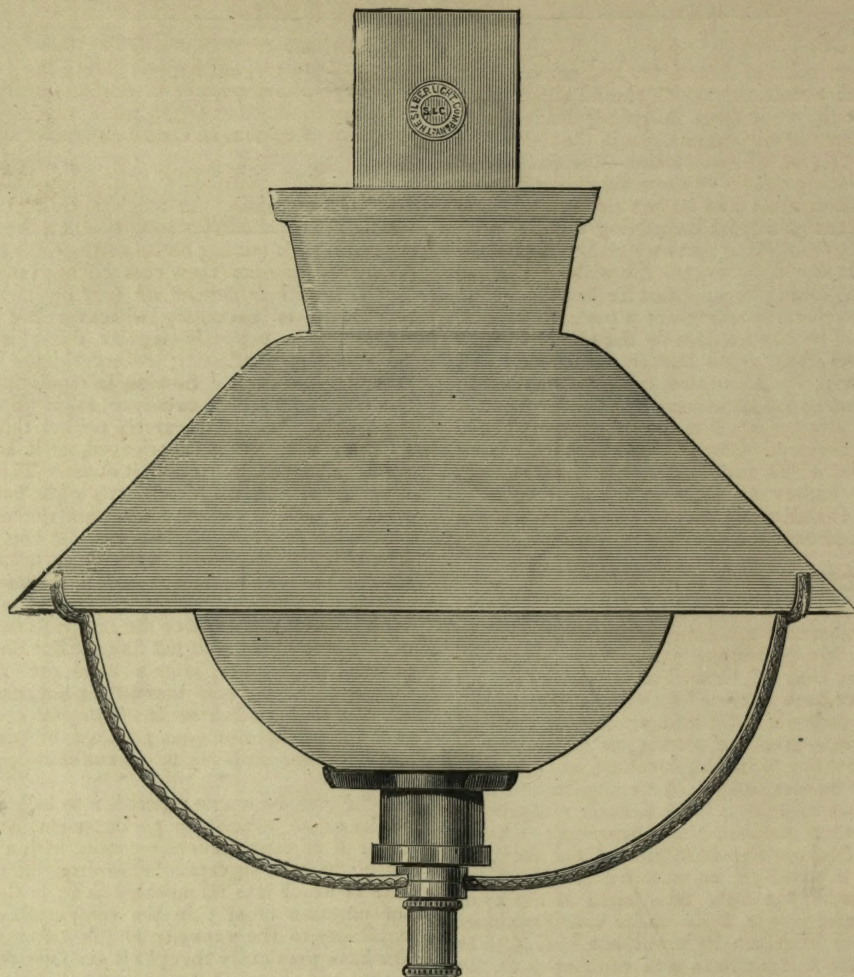

THE SILBER (PATENT) TUBULATED GAS BURNER.

THE SILBER TUBULATED GAS BURNER for the amount of gas consumed gives more illuminating power than any other Gas Burner yet introduced; when a 7-in. Chimney is used it gives a light equal to 22 sperm candles for a consumption of 5 cubic feet of gas per hour, and by substituting a longer chimney a proportionate increase of light is obtained, with a corresponding increased consumption of gas.

Chimneys kept in stock, 7-in., 8-in., 9-in., and 10-in.

The following is taken from the Lancet :—

"Our readers are aware that by contrivances for carefully regulating the amount and direction of air in lamps, Mr. Silber had obtained light of singular steadiness, whiteness, and illuminating power, with much less expenditure of oil, mineral or vegetable, than heretofore, and with the great additional advantage of such perfect combustion of the material used, as to preserve the purity of the atmosphere. Mr. Silber has now achieved a similar success by the application of his principles to the construction of gas burners, which will secure for us a very superior light from a smaller quantity of gas, without that deterioration of the atmosphere which makes gas-heated rooms a source of discomfort and sometimes of disease. Mr. Silber's burners will enable the required illuminating result to be got out of inferior gas, and so may, in the first instance, benefit the gas companies, which are already absurdly petted and protected. But as an economic and sanitary question, Mr. Silber's invention should lead to a reconsideration of the whole of our gas laws, and a reconstruction of our gas burners."

No. 8632 1/2.—The Silber Tubulated Burner, for Coal or Air Gas, fitted with Opal Shade and Eye Screen, and with ornamental brass shade holder. Drawn one-half real size. For price see Price List of page 253.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

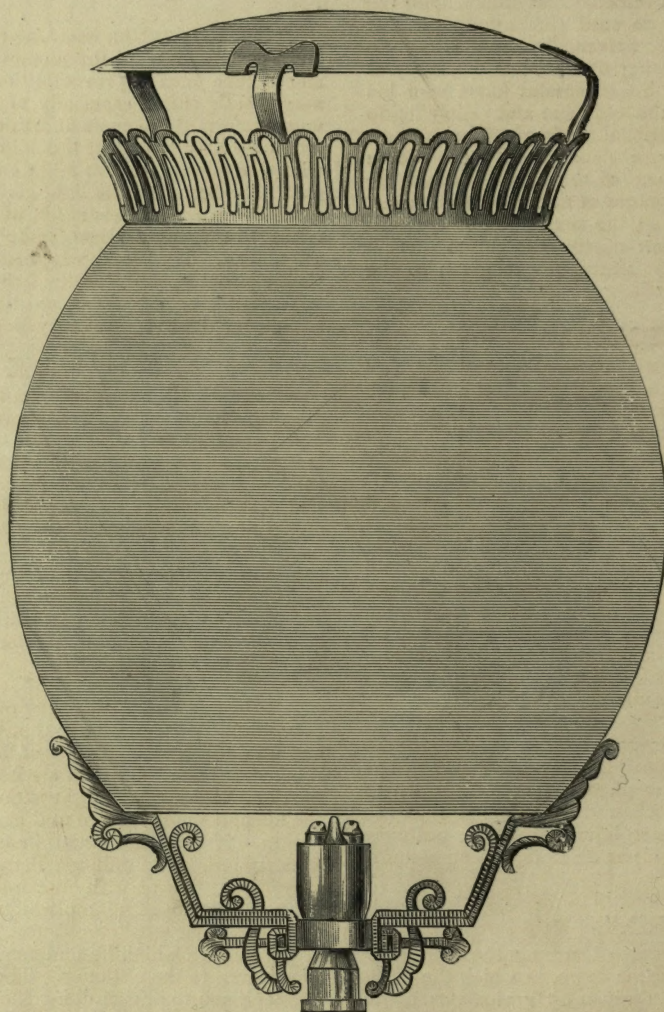

The Silber Tubulated Burner can also be had fitted with Automatic Regulators at a little additional cost. When ordering please state what quantity of gas is required to be burnt per hour. The light afforded per cubic foot of gas per hour can be reckoned, for convenience, approximately, as 4 Candlelight or 20 Candlelight for 5 cubic feet of gas per hour.

SILBER'S NEW PATENT CONCORDIA GAS BURNER.

In this new (flat-flame) Gas Burner, the Silber Light Company claims to have ascertained the proper point at which the convergence of two flames should occur, and by the introduction of a properly and mathematically adjusted combination the atmospheric oxygen is driven into the flame at the right elevation, and in this way better combustion is induced. It will be seen by the statistics given below that the results obtained are absolutely unprecedented and without parallel in any flat-flame gas burner hitherto before the public.

The burner is made in five sizes, consuming from 3 1/2 to 9 1/2 cubic feet of 16 candle light gas at one inch pressure per hour, and the illumination and consumption at various pressures will be seen below.

Dr. W. WALLACE, F.R.S.E., F.C.S., states in a letter addressed to Mr. Silber, "I have now had an opportunity of making some tests with your Argand Burners, and of comparing them with some others; after careful study of the principle of the Argand, I have come to the conclusion that your Burner is the best at present known."

The following are the results of comparative trials with various Argands burned at the rate of about 4 cubic feet, and calculated to 5 feet per hour :—

1 Silber, 40 hole, Steatite top, funnel 7 by 1 1/2	23'20	Candles.

The Manager of the Gas Works at Southport in a letter stated that when their Gas is at 18 candles with the Standard burner, the Silber gives it at 22 candles, adding "You ought to get it noticed by the Gas Managers at once," and the following are some of the results obtained by the Southport Borough Medical Officer (Dr. Henry H. Vernon) :—

Each burner tested under similar circumstances, and each consuming 5 cubic feet per hour.

The larger flames are especially suitable for Shops, Churches, Chapels, Schools, Halls, and other places where naked lights are used, also for street and platform lamps.

For lighting Theatres, Refreshment Rooms, and other places, this burner when fitted with globe and coronet as No. 8629 1/2 has a very excellent appearance, and the results are economical and efficient.

When tested in comparison with the best known Argand Burner (the Standard Test Burner) the illuminating power for the same consumption has invariably been found to be in excess, as 18 candle light (Standard Burner) is to 20 candle light (Silber Concordia Burner with naked flame), the Argand Burner, of course, requiring a glass chimney.

The Concordia Burner is now being so made that one of the flames can be extinguished when the light is required to be turned low, and in this way is strikingly exhibited the advantages of the new burner.
